The Giant Axolotl of Random Lake

This is a story about a giant axolotl that lives in Random Lake and is 30 feet tall and 150 feet long. It ate all the fish in the lake so no fishermen get to fish in there. He goes to the deep end so no kids step on him or else he gets mad. He stays in one spot so he doesn't get caught on a hook and doesn't get captured, so that's why he stays in one spot. Not a lot of people have seen him. People are scared that if it goes on their land it will eat their house and them alive. Some people think it's fake. I would tell them about it and they would be scared and worry that it would come into their yard too and eat too and break their house too or not even swim in it or move away to somewhere else that's not close to Random Lake. If every one moves away he'll have Random Lake to himself and maybe rename it to something else and that's why no one goes out far in the lake.
